

THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA

College of Humanities

Distinguished Teaching Award Spring 2017

Deadline: Monday, March 6 at 4:00 p.m.

The Distinguished Teaching Award recognizes teaching excellence at all levels but the College of Humanities places particular emphasis on teaching at the undergraduate level.

Criteria

The award is intended to honor an individual who has demonstrated a passion for teaching and who has demonstrated a committed and sustained effort to ensure the quality of the students' learning experience. This is a one-time award of $1000*.

Eligibility

College of Humanities faculty members. According to UHAP Chapter 3, "Faculty shall mean those members of The University of Arizona who are appointed to positions that are responsible for and whose performance evaluations are primarily based on the teaching, research and public service goals and objectives of the institution; and who have professor, associate professor, assistant professor, visiting professors, instructor, or lecturer in their title. To also include, Second Language Acquisition and Teaching program students who teach College of Humanities.

Nomination Instructions

While it is suggested that the department/program present a strong nomination packet, all letters of nomination will be accepted. Departmental nominations should include:

- A letter of nomination addressing the nominee's contributions to teaching.
- A statement of nominee's teaching philosophy.
- Letters of support with at least four letters from students.
