

The School of International Languages, Literatures, and Cultures (SILLC), the School of Anthropology, and the Department of Classics in conjunction with the National Endowment for the Humanities Enduring Questions Program present a panel:

Why Cooperate?

An Interdisciplinary Conversation

Panelists

Anna Dornhaus

Associate Professor, Ecology and Evolutionary Biology

Faten Ghosn

Assistant Professor, Government and Public Policy

Steven Johnstone

Associate Professor, History

Steven Lansing

Professor, Anthropology

Robert Schon (Moderator)

Assistant Professor, Anthropology and Classics

Phyllis Taoua

Associate Professor, French and Italian

Stacey Tecot

Assistant Professor, Anthropology

Kelland Thomas

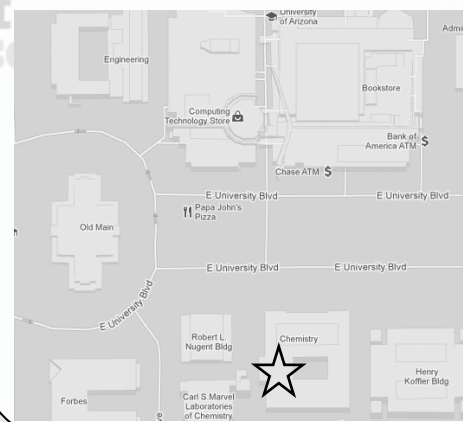

Associate Professor, Music and SISTA

Time & Location:

Monday, April 9, 2012

3:00 – 5:30 PM

Chemistry 134

This event is free and open to the public.

For more information, please contact:

Robert Schon

rschon@email.arizona.edu

520-626-0634

One of the hallmarks of being human is our inclination to do things together. Through our collective action, we create language, build states and empires, alter our landscape, and produce brilliant works of art. However, cooperating can come at a cost to the individual. So what explains our propensity to do so? This panel of University of Arizona professors representing diverse scientific and humanistic fields explores this question from various perspectives, ranging from animal behavior to politics to musical jam sessions. Our goal is to identify and explore themes in cooperation that resonate across disciplines.

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE Humanities

School of International Languages
Literatures &
Cultures

SCHOOL OF ANTHROPOLOGY

DEPARTMENT of CLASSICS

